Chicago 17th B referencing guide

Last updated FEBRUARY 2023

Chicago 17th B is an author-date referencing style used across a broad range of subject areas. It is based on the Chicago Manual of Style, 17th edition.

This guide is primarily for students completing assignments at Curtin University. If you are publishing (e.g. journal article, PhD), please consult the above publication as examples provided here may differ slightly from the requirements outlined in the official style guide.

Using this guide

This guide includes three sections which, when used together, will address how to create in-text citations and reference list entries in the Chicago 17th B referencing style.

In-text citations explained

Provides information and examples regarding quoting, paraphrasing and other scenarios primarily impacting your in-text citations.

Author variations

Provides information and examples crucial to the construction of your in-text citations and reference list. Not sure how to display different numbers of authors, a corporate author or no author at all? You'll find the information here.

Reference list examples

Provides information and examples for constructing your reference list entries.

About Chicago 17th B referencing

Referencing is a standardised method of acknowledging sources of information and ideas that you have used in your assignments or research, in a way that uniquely identifies the source. It is not only necessary for avoiding plagiarism, but also for supporting your ideas and arguments.

There are two parts to referencing:

- In-text citation
- Reference list entry

In-text citations explained

In-text citations are included throughout the course of your writing, to acknowledge the sources of information you have used to build and support your ideas. An in-text citation provides information about the author, the year the information was published, and sometimes location information such as a page number.

An in-text citation can be presented in different ways:

Stark and Lannister (2019) – the author(s) names are part of the sentence, appearing outside the brackets

(Stark and Lannister 2019) – all the referencing information appears within brackets

The table below provides additional information and examples of how to reference in-text when quoting and paraphrasing in the Chicago 17thB author-date style.

Quoting (40 words or less)

Quoting is when you copy the exact words from another source into your work.

- Short quotations should be run in (incorporated) within the text
- Place quotation marks around the quote
- In-text citation includes author, year of publication and page number
- Use paragraph number for sources where the page number is not available

In-text citation

According to Palladino and Wade (2010, 147), “a flexible mind is a healthy mind.”

In fact, “a flexible mind is a healthy mind” (Palladino and Wade 2010, 147).

Lee (2015, para. 1) states that, “double quotation marks are used to enclose quoted material.”

“In the APA and Chicago referencing styles, double quotation marks are used to enclose quoted material” (Lee 2015, para. 1).

Quoting (40 words or more)

- Use a freestanding block of text which:
 - Starts on a new line
 - Is indented from the left margin
 - Does not include quotation marks
- Your in-text citation will appear in brackets after the final punctuation mark and will include the author, year of publication, and page/paragraph number (note: there is no punctuation mark after the in-text citation)

In-text citation

In-text citations are important in academic writing, drawing the parallel between the author's work and the sources which support it:

The function of any citation-signaller is to alert the reader to some kind of association between the citing text and the cited text. Citation-signallers may additionally, by using page references or chapter numbers, single out a particular part of the text as especially relevant. (Langham 2005, 361)

Paraphrasing

Paraphrasing is when you present the ideas of others in your own words.

- In-text citation includes author and year of publication
- Check with your lecturer to see whether you should also include a page number (which is recommended in the Chicago manual, but not required)

In-text citation

Palladino and Wade (2010) argue that mental well-being is linked with flexible thinking.

It could be argued that mental flexibility is a key factor in well-being (Palladino and Wade 2010).

Multiple sources for the same information

When including multiple sources to support a particular point in your writing or demonstrate a consensus:

- Include all sources in the same set of brackets. You can choose to order these names alphabetically by author, chronologically by date of publication, or by importance, whichever best supports your work
- Separate the citations with semi colons
- Include a reference list entry for each source

In-text citation

There is an established consensus that the current trend towards a warming climate is directly linked to human activity (Hegerl 1996; Levitus et al. 2017; NASA, n.d.; Robinson, Hall, and Mote 2014; Santer et al. 2003).

Multiple works by the same author(s) – published in different years

- Order chronologically in the reference list
- For a publication with no date (n.d.) list this after the authors' other publications with dates

In-text citation

(Bull 2008). OR Bull (2008) states...

Multiple works by the same author(s) – published in the same year

- Add a, b, c after the year to differentiate works by the same author(s) published in the same year
- Order alphabetically by the title of the work in the reference list
- For references that have no date (shown by n.d.), use the following forms for the date in the in-text citation and reference list: (n.d.-a), (n.d.-b) etc.

In-text citation

Different authors with the same surname

If referring to two or more publications where the primary (first) authors have the same surname, include the first author's initials in all in-text citations, even if the year of publication differs.

In-text citation

(B. Johnson 2017). OR According to B. Johnson (2017)...

(M. Johnson, Sanchez, and Zheng 2016). OR M. Johnson, Sanchez, and Zheng (2016) state...

Authors citing other authors

Academic content such as books and journal articles will often contain a lot of citations. When do you need to give credit to the original author (primary source)? Cite the original author when:

- They are quoted by your source (the secondary source)
- When a specific study is discussed in the secondary source and you reproduce findings or arguments from that study without accessing the primary source
- The in-text citation should include author details from the primary source, as well as the author, year of publication and page/paragraph number from the secondary source
- Only the secondary source is included in the reference list

In-text citation

..."event in nature or in society" (Blaikie et al. 1994, as quoted by Maldonado et al. 2013, 602).

Lazrus (2012, as quoted by Maldonado et al. 2013, 610) outlines the exemptions for certain populations.

Author variations (for in-text citations and reference list)

Author variations apply to all reference types

No author

Most published scholarly sources will have an author. If no personal author is given, check to see if an organisation/corporate body has acted as the author and that the source is credible. Where there are no authors follow the guidelines below:

- Use the title of the work in place of the author in the in-text citation and in the reference list
- If the title is too long, shorten it in the in-text citation but always include the first word of the title
- If the item is a smaller part of a publication (e.g. journal article, book chapter), enclose the title in quotation marks in both the in-text and reference list
- If the item is a book, brochure, website or report, italicise the title both in the in-text and reference list

Note: Newspaper or magazine articles are exceptions to the above guidelines. Refer to the Newspaper and magazine article section of this guide

One – two authors

- List author(s) in every citation
- Include all authors in the reference list entry

Three authors

- For in-text citations, include all author surnames
- Include all authors in the reference list entry

In-text citation

Four or more authors

- For in-text citations, include only the surname of the first author followed by et al. (meaning and others)
- Include all authors in the reference list entry

In-text citation

Organisation as author

- If required, organisation names can be abbreviated for the in-text citation, however the name should be written out in full the first time it is mentioned in text to avoid ambiguity
- If you have used the abbreviated name in the in-text citation, list the abbreviated name first followed by the organisation's full name in brackets in the reference list e.g. WHO (World Health Organization)
- Where multiple departments are listed, use the organisation most responsible for the information as the author. In government documents particularly, the hierarchy is often displayed. For example: Royal Perth Hospital, Department of Health, Government of Western Australia. The smallest department is usually primarily responsible for the content (in this case, Royal Perth Hospital)

Reference components

A reference consists of a number of components that allow the identification of the original source. These components must be presented with specific formatting. Examples for a couple of reference types are provided below. Find components for additional reference types in the table of reference list examples.

Journal article:

Reference list examples

Your reference list includes all of the books, journal articles, reports etc. that you have cited in the text of your work. When using the Chicago 17thB style:

- Include the reference list at the end of your work on a new page
- Label the page References with this title appearing centred, at the top of the page (it should not be bolded, underlined, or have quotation marks around it)
- Arrange the list alphabetically by the first author’s surname or organisation name. Where there is no author, use the first word of the title (other than A, An, or The)
- All titles appear in headline style capitalisation (where all significant words are capitalised)
- See an example of a Chicago 17thB reference list in the Chicago Author-Date Referencing Guide: Sample Reference List
